Following in Their Footsteps

On November 15, 1898, Mrs. L.D. Temple and thirty - four women established “The Woman's Club of Flemington” to promote the intellectual and social life of its members, to engage in philanthropic work as opportunity may present and for the general improvement of the Village of Flemington as to cleanliness of streets, promotion of literary interests, and every other thing tending to the advancement of the best interests of the Village.”

The Club's interest in things literary started that first year: The club established a Reading Room for the public. The Free Public Library was then established in 1899. Also in 1899, the club voted to join the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs which is part of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. In 1907, the club incorporated as the Flemington Woman's Club and purchased the lot behind the Old Courthouse on Park Avenue in Flemington. It is now a county park complete with bandstand and is the site of our clubhouse which was built in 1936.

Today, the Club continues the work of those thirty-four charter members who knew, over 100 years ago, the power of a determined woman, multiplied by hundreds. The women of the Flemington Woman's Club have supported their community for 100+ years.

Through our work together, we form enduring relationships with each other and with those we serve.
